

DrumBus® Group-Rhythm Events

For thousands of years and in many cultures, drumming has been used for community building, celebration and self-expression. Drum circles engage diverse populations, transcending common barriers such as language, physical ability and socio-economic status.

Confidence

When students join together in creating group rhythm they collaborate in non-verbal and creative ways.

Collaboration

Our programming is accessible to students of all ages and abilities regardless of previous musical experience.

Community

Participation connects students to each other and builds a sense of community.

“Most of the children in our programs have never had a music experience like the Rhythms of Life drumming program. Each child who participated was very enthusiastic and happy to have this experience. I would highly recommend this program to any school or afterschool program.”

—Chris Jewell, Program Coordinator,
Extended Day Programs

Benefits of Drumming

- Builds community through collaboration.
- Promotes relaxation, self-confidence and well-being.
- Provides a medium for positive self-expression.
- Integrates right and left brain.
- Improves concentration, focus and listening skills.

"I want to THANK YOU for the incredible drum session at camp! I continue to hear great things from everyone that was involved and it made a BIG impact on the participants in being able to connect with one another...You do great work!"

—Director, The Inclusion Center

“I’ve seen a significant decrease in the number of altercations between students on the playground since the Rhythms of Life workshops. I like the fact that almost any age child can play.”
